The 28 member states of the EU: see page 15

Europe Day: 9 May (in celebration of the Schuman Declaration, 1950)

Open Day: in May every year the EU institutions open their doors to the public.
The European institutions

The European Parliament represents the European Union’s citizens and is composed of 751 members of parliament elected by direct universal suffrage every 5 years. The latest elections were held in May 2014. Together with the Council of the European Union, the Parliament adopts laws proposed by the European Commission, and also adopts the European Union budget. In addition, the European Parliament acts as a means of democratic scrutiny. Its headquarters are in Strasbourg, but it also works in Brussels and Luxembourg.

www.europarl.europa.eu

The European Council brings together the heads of state or government of the 28 EU member states, the European Council President and the President of the European Commission. The High Representative of the Union for Foreign Affairs and Security Policy also takes part in European Council meetings when foreign affairs issues are discussed. The President is elected by the European Council for a term of two and a half years, which is renewable once. The European Council defines the EU’s overall political direction and priorities. It does not exercise any legislative function. The headquarters of the European Council are in Brussels.

The Council of the European Union (or the Council) is made up of ministers from the member states and meets in different formations according to the subjects on the agenda (foreign affairs, finance, transport, agriculture, etc.).

The Council negotiates and adopts EU laws and the EU budget, together with the European Parliament. It coordinates member states’ policies, for example in the economic field, develops the common foreign and security policy and concludes international agreements.

The Council can decide by simple majority voting (at least 15 members in favour), qualified majority voting or unanimity (all 28 members in favour or abstaining).

In qualified majority voting the size of each member state’s population is also reflected. A qualified majority is reached if the following two conditions are met:

- 55 % of the member states (i.e. 16 members) vote in favour, and
- they represent at least 65 % of the total EU population.

In addition, any blocking minority must include at least four Council members representing at least 35 % of the EU population.

A voting calculator is available on the Council’s website: www.consilium.europa.eu > The Council of the EU > Voting system.
The Council deliberates in public when examining and voting on draft legislative acts. You can follow the debates live on the Council’s website. Member states take it in turns to chair the Council for a period of 6 months. The headquarters of the Council are in Brussels.

www.consilium.europa.eu

The European Commission is made up of 28 commissioners, one from each member state. It is the EU’s politically independent executive arm. The commissioners defend the general interests of the European Union and not the specific interests of their own countries. The Commission proposes laws to the European Parliament and the Council, executes their decisions, implements policies and the EU budget, negotiates international agreements, and together with the Court of Justice ensures that EU law is properly applied in all the member states. The headquarters of the Commission are in Brussels.

The Court of Justice of the European Union comprises two courts: the Court of Justice and the General Court. The Court of Justice has one judge from each member state. It reviews the legality of acts of the EU institutions and ensures that member states comply with the treaties. It also interprets EU law at the request of national judges, and ensures its uniform application in the member states. The General Court is made up of at least one judge per member state (from 1 September 2019 two judges per member state). It handles, for example, cases brought by companies or individuals directly affected by acts of the EU institutions. The headquarters of the Court of Justice of the European Union are in Luxembourg.

The European Central Bank defines and implements monetary policy in the euro area countries. The main task of the European Central Bank, together with the national central banks, is to maintain price stability in the euro area and thus to protect purchasing power. The euro area comprises the 19 European Union countries that have introduced the euro as their currency. The European Central Bank has the right to issue euro bank notes, but in practice only the national central banks of the euro area issue bank notes and coins. The headquarters of the European Central Bank are in Frankfurt am Main.

The European Court of Auditors audits the Union’s finances. It checks that the budget of the European Union has been implemented correctly, and that EU funds have been raised and spent legally and in accordance with the principles of sound financial management. The Court of Auditors consists of one member from each member state, nominated by their national governments and appointed by the Council. The members are independent and take no instructions from their home countries. The Court’s headquarters are in Luxembourg.

Other EU bodies

The European Economic and Social Committee is a consultative body of the European Union. The committee enables civil society organisations from the member states to express their views at European level. Its opinions are forwarded to the Council, the European Commission and the European Parliament. The committee has 350 members drawn from economic and social interest groups in Europe. The members are nominated by national governments and appointed by the Council. The committee’s headquarters are in Brussels.

www.eesc.europa.eu

The European Committee of the Regions is the voice of the regions and cities in the European Union. It is a consultative body of the European Union and allows regions, cities and municipalities to express their views at European level. Its opinions are forwarded to the Council, the European Commission and the European Parliament. The committee’s 350 members are regionally and locally elected representatives from all EU member states. They are nominated by national governments and appointed by the Council. The headquarters of the committee are in Brussels.

The European External Action Service (EEAS) is the Union’s diplomatic service. Its role is to make sure that the European Union’s voice is heard in the world. It is headed by the High Representative for Foreign Affairs and Security Policy, who is also a vice-president of the European Commission and chairs the Foreign Affairs Council. The Union’s action on the international scene seeks to promote human rights, development, humanitarian aid, trade and the work of multilateral organisations. The headquarters of the EEAS are in Brussels but it also works worldwide through its 139 delegations.

www.eeas.europa.eu

The European Ombudsman investigates complaints about maladministration in the institutions and bodies of the European Union. If you are a citizen of a member state of the Union or reside in a member state, you can make a complaint to the ombudsman. Businesses, associations or other bodies with a registered office in the Union may also complain to the ombudsman. The headquarters of the ombudsman are in Strasbourg.

www.ombudsman.europa.eu

The European Data Protection Supervisor is a supervisory authority with the objective of ensuring that the European institutions and bodies respect the right to privacy when they process personal data and develop new policies and legislation. This is done by monitoring the EU administration’s processing of personal data, advising on policies and legislation that affect privacy, and cooperating with similar authorities around Europe to ensure consistent data protection. The headquarters of the supervisor are in Brussels.

The European Anti-Fraud Office (or OLAF) investigates fraud in connection with the European Union budget, corruption and serious misconduct within the European institutions, and develops anti-fraud policy for the European Commission. OLAF also funds technical assistance and training for national and regional administrations, universities, research centres and organisations. The office’s headquarters are in Brussels.

The European Investment Bank is the only bank owned by and representing the interests of the European Union member states. It works closely with other EU institutions to implement EU policy. The bank provides finance and expertise for sound and sustainable investment projects which help to further EU policy objectives. Its main focus is on contributing to the development of the internal market, but it also supports the EU’s external and development policies. The bank’s headquarters are in Luxembourg.

It reflects the total value of all goods and services produced less the value of goods and services used for their production. Expressing GDP in PPS (purchasing power standards) eliminates differences in price levels between countries, and calculations on a per head basis allow the comparison of economies significantly different in terms of absolute size.
